The Democrats are now beginning to believe that total depravity has something to do with their party.
Before the canvass closes the Democrats should try and give one reason why the Republican ticket should not be elected.
Mr. A. E. STILES, of Chicago, calls the Democratic party an "Organized Appetite." This name will cling to the party as long as it exists.
The Republican party and the boom are cutting an important figure in the canvass. From these sources the Democrats derive their embarrassment.
The Democrats have no part or lot in any of the great "booms" of the day. They stand amazed at the—Republican booms,
Republican enterprise,
Republican confidence, Republican enthusiasm, and Republican majorities.
The Republicans of New York hold ninety-one large mass meetings to-day, besides numerous local meetings. Among the distinguished men who speak to-day, are James G. Blaine, Charles Foster, General Kilpatrick, Thurlow Weed, Fred Douglass, General Garfield, and many others of national fame, and orators of high standing and power.
The voters of Janesville understand the prime importance of sending to the Assembly a man capable of properly managing the business in which the city will be deeply interested. There should be no trifling in regard to this matter. Mr.
Lawrence is the man and all Republicans and independent Democrats should see that he is elected by a large majority.
Mr. Jenkins, at the eleventh hour of the canvass, sees fit to deny that he ever hur-rured for Jeff Davis and rejoiced over the assassination of Lincoln. Mr. Jenkins may not intend to make a misstatement, but facts show that once he did hurry for Jeff Davis and that he was knocked down for it. Even the Democratic papers have said that he was not a war Democrat, and was to be complimented for not being one.
The Madison Democrat says: "There are thousands of Democrats in the State who have not awakened to the responsibility of the hour." That is very true, but the private circular issued by the editor of the Democrat, said the Democrats were hopeful, enthusiastic, and all that, and which must the people take as authority, the Democrat's editorial or the Democrat's private and confidential circular? One gives the lie to the other, and which to believe? The Democrats themselves.
This system of running a campaign shows the desperate circumstances in which the Democratic party of Wisconsin is placed.
The Harper Brothers are about to begin an enterprise which should receive the applause of the country. They propose to commence the publication of an illustrated weekly next week to be called "Harper's Young People." Most of the weekly story-papers now published in this country are "blood-curdling" and intensely bad and do as much to prepare young men for the State Prison as any other influence known. The Harpers have the ability to make their new journal the best in the land and it will be done. The public can feel satisfied that it will be a movement to the enterprise of the firm, and it will be a good paper for the young people.

A WOMAN FOR OFFICE.
Mrs. O. R. Smith, who formerly resided in Janesville, has been nominated by the Democrats of Monroe county, for Superintendent of Schools of that county. It will be remembered that her husband, Professor O. R. Smith, was several ago, Superintendent of our city schools, and two years last August, while on a hunting excursion in Jackson county, accidentally shot himself, and from the wounds received, died the day following. His widow is in much reduced circumstances, and though her husband was a strong Republican, the Democrats have taken her up in the hope that her unfortunate condition would tend to defeat the Republican candidate. Mrs.
Smith has accepted the nomination, and rests her claims to the office upon the fact that (1) she is well qualified to fill the position; and (2) that she is a woman and a widow in great need of support, with a large family to care for.
There is a question whether or not, if she should be elected, she can hold the office. Chief Justice Ryan seems to hold that a woman, under the law, is not an elector, and therefore cannot hold an elective office. Should Mrs. Smith receive a majority of the votes, and should qualify, there is hardly a probability that she will be disturbed in the office. By common consent she will be permitted to discharge the duties of the office in case the people elect her.

ABOUT CHANDLER AND LOGAN.
The Janesville Times probably thought it was doing the Democratic party a service, and was giving some historical facts, when it said last evening that Senators Logan and Chandler have both voted in Congress for every subsidy, and every grab that has disgraced that body for the past fifteen years, "including the salary grab and the credit mobliser." It may be that the editor of the Times made this statement in good faith, and that he really supposed that every Republican in Congress voted for the several doubtful measures which passed Congress a few years ago. Senator Logan was among the Senators who voted for the Salary Act of 1873, and there were fourteen Democrats, including Mr. Bayard, who voted with him. Senator Chandler did not vote for the Salary Act of 1873, and neither did he take the back salary. Now let the editor of the Times bear this fact in mind—that there were only 4 Democrats who voted with Chandler to kill the Salary Act bill, while there were 22 Republican Senators who voted against the bill.
Again, it is time for the editor of the Times to know, if he does not already know, that neither John A. Logan nor Zach Chandler voted for the Credit Mobielizer legislation, and that Mr. Chandler was never known to support any of the extraneous measures which came before Congress during his term of service. In this respect, Mr. Chandler always won the respect and the confidence of the people, and was a staunch defender of economical and honest legislation.
These are facts which the editor of the Times should know before he attempts to attack the character of two so incorruptible men as Chandler and Logan. They are men who deserve the honors of the nation and challenge the gratitude of the people for what they have done for human liberty and for the business prosperity of the country.

THE HOUSE OF CORRECTION.
There appears to be a very general opinion in Milwaukee that the charges published in the Sentinel regarding the management of the House of Correction are so appalling to be true. While some admit that there may be wrongs committed by the management of the prison, the many place no confidence in the startling charges which have shocked the community.
There will be nothing definitely known concerning the truth or the falsity of the charges until the State Board of Charities and Reform. This should commence at once, and when commenced should be vigorous and thorough. The subject is one of the most important ever brought to the attention of that Board, and the charges are the gravest that have ever been made against an institution in this State. There should be no patch-work about the investigation, no political prejudice should enter into the question of the guilt or the innocence of the managers, but the examination should be thoroughly honest and far-reaching. The public will expect this. They want to know whether or not there exists in Wisconsin, a penal institution in which more brutalities are inflit-ed, more filth permitted, more disgraceful management allowed, and more sickening scenes witnessed, than in the prisons of Europe in the 18th century.
In the meantime, the Milwaukee Sentinel follows Kennedy and Hase with unrelenting bitterness. It has yet shown no signs of weakening, and demands an investigation into all the charges made against these officers. On the one hand, these officers are bringing suits against the Sentinel, and on the other hand the Sentinel is industriously engaged in collecting the material to prove that every charge of fraud and inhumanity practiced in the House of Correction is true. This is the condition of things to-day, and when the investigation will end is not definite.

His Views on the Situation—His excuse for not speaking in Wisconsin.
WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 30.—The National Republican will to-morrow publish a long interview with Senator Carpenter.
In this interview Mr. Carpenter defines his relation to Wisconsin campaign, and declares his status in National politics.
The following extracts give the purport of the interview:
"Senator, how is it that you are not on the stump this fall?"
"Well, there are two reasons for it.
First, I am in the hospital, and, for the first time in my life, a succession of severe colds and an unusual amount of labor during the winter and spring impaired my health, and my physicians advised me that what I need is rest, which they say will be followed by complete restoration. From a doctor's decree there is no appeal, and so I am excluded from the labor and excitement of a political canvass. I have regretted this, because it has become a fixed habit of my life to take a hand on every such occasion. In the second place, Wisconsin is certain to go right. Our ticket there is headed by the Hon. William E.
Smith, who has made a popular and efficient Governor. All the State officers were re-nominated, and their administration having been unexceptionable, they are all certain to be re-elected." Being asked to account for the result in Ohio, Mr. Carpenter expressed the opinion that it was largely due to the fact that the Northern people see that Democratic success means Rebel ascendancy in the administration of the Government. The extra session gave the Southern leaders an opportunity to develop their plans and show their purpose to rule or ruin the country.
Upon this point Mr. Carpenter takes the most stalwart ground. He said that at the extra session everything was determined in Democratic caucus. The Rebel element constituted a majority of that caucus, so that the laws effected were in fact Rebel enactments. The people of Ohio saw plainly that the only way to prevent this in the future was to drive the Democrats from power.
Speaking of presidential candidates, Mr.
Carpenter says: "If New York and Pennsylvania should go strongly Republican, it will be pretty certain that the Republican party, with any good candidate, will sweep the field in 1880, and the effort will undoubtedly be to open the prize to the widest competition among the candidates in the Convention, and the choice will be determined by personal preferences or chance. Looking at the situation, I declined to take any part in the matter." General Grant never was a candidate in the usual sense of that term.
That is, he never sought the office. Should he be nominated by acclamation he will undoubtedly accept, and his acceptance will be equivalent to his election. As to the Southern policy of the Administration, he said: "It served one good purpose. It proved that the South was in no mood for any policy of conciliation short of an absolute surrender of all the results achieved by the war."

CULLOM AND SMITH.
Grand Republican Rally in the Assembly Chamber.
MADISON, Oct. 30.—A grand Republican rally was held at the Assembly Chamber this evening. The large Chamber was filled to overflowing by an enthusiastic audience of the best people of Madison to listen to Governor Cullom, of Illinois, and Governor Smith, of Wisconsin. General David Atwood presided at the meeting and introduced Governor Smith, who spoke with his usual eloquence. The people were wild with enthusiasm when Governor Cullom was introduced. He made a strong and eloquent speech, portraying in vivid language the glorious record of the Republican party from its formation down to the present time, contrasting its glorious record with the Rebel Brigadier Democracy, when once endeavored to destroy the Union, and would ruin it if they had the power now. Predictions of Republican victory in Wisconsin of from 10,000 to 20, 000 majority next Tuesday were made by most speakers, which will undoubtedly be verified by the votes. Upon the conclusion of Governor Cullom's speech, he was greeted with prolonged applause and cheers. Governor Smith and Governor Cullom leave here on the night train for Richland Center, where they speak tomorrow night.

ON THE CARS.
The Flight of the Special Train with General Grant.
ON THE SPECIAL TRAIN, Oct. 30, 8 p. m.
—We arrived at Ogden at 2 p. m., San Francisco time, and, after stopping a half hour, left at 3:50, Laramie time, and, as I write this dispatch, we are within twenty minutes of Green River, 187 miles east of Ogden and 845 miles from Omaha. We are making about forty miles an hour on the handsome train ever run over the Union Pacific or any other road in the United States, and, as General Grant said at dinner, "When you have said that any train is the finest or any house the most beautiful in the United States, you may always add in the world." Our engine is No. 151, one of the newest, brightest, and strongest on the road. General Grant and family occupy Mr. Pullman's private car, which is incom-think, in a little village called D—. But that's not the shop. The shop's in town somewhere. A stationer's I've heard say, and—

"Thank you, thank you, that will do! Here is a trifle to drink success to my search."

I managed to get away at last, and was soon being conveyed over the lines of the Southwestern railway to Reading.

It was a lively afternoon when I entered the little village of D—. I soon espied the little cottage to which I had been directed, half hidden from the road by a row of copular trees, and it was with very little hesitation I was soon walking up the little garden path and ringing the bell.

The Grahams were out, but I explained that I was a friend of the family, and had come a very long way expressly to see them.

This gained me the desired "open sesame," and I was soon ushered into the little parlor. Yes, this was Lilly's home. I gazed around me as though I was in the sacred precinct of some holy spot. As my eyes wandered around the sweetly-scented little parlor they rested at last upon some milliner's boxes that lay upon the table.

I saw such boxes in my youth, and knew them to contain the appurtenances of marriage garments.

Yes, I realized her, my Lilly's name on them. I lifted the lids slightly, and, alas! my fears were too true; they were the bridal decorations of Lillian Graham.

I could only just manage to recover myself as an open carriage drove up to the garden gate. I could not see them, but I soon saw an old lady and gentleman, whom I recognized as Mr. and Mrs. Graham, and then I saw the dear face of Lilly—

I saw it to notice it was pale, thin and sad—saw it to quickly tell that even propriety, and perhaps the prospect of an advantageous marriage, had not made her look better than the merry, laughing-eyed, little maiden of sweet 17.

And then I saw a gentleman, tall and well-dressed, with his back toward me, giving some directions to the coachman. More than this I could not see, for the old couple had entered the parlor.

"Oh, Mr. and Mrs. Graham I said, eagerly, 'do you not know me?'

"I really haven't the honor," somewhat stiffly said the old gentleman.

"What! not know Bob Phillips, that went to Australia eight years ago?"

"Bob Phillips! go! go! go!"

This last was uttered by the tall gentleman, in a tone of undisguised surprise.

My name had seemed to create a varied impression upon them all. The little old gentleman looked a trifle startled, while Mrs. Graham appeared startled and presently broke out quite tragically.

"Robert Phillips! risen from his grave!"

"Risen from his grave?" said I, growing still more confused and surprised at this unexpected turn of affairs.

"Yes, sir, from his grave," said Mr. Markham; "yes, sir; it is no use of your trying to pass yourself off as that young man. He has been dead these three years. I was present at his funeral myself."

"Indeed, said I smiling, but almost chilling Mr. Markham to death with the scrutinizing glance I gave him 'Ah! I recollect seeing you in Australia, I think.'"

"You are an impostor, and I shall be forced to turn you out of the house if you do not instantly leave."

"Very few words, Mr. Simon Rail, said Markham. I shall turn you out instead—thief, would be murdered and double dyed villain.

Amid the screams of the servant and Mrs. Graham, and not heeding the feeble expostulations of the old gentleman, we closed the door and fled into the passage. Here with a little muscular exertion and well-directed blow between the eyes, I soon threw Mr. Markham (as he called himself) senseless in the hall, just as Lilly, hearing my voice—she had not forgotten it; she did care even if it was my ghost, or if I had come for a transitory stay from the other world—came and threw herself into my arms, exclaiming:

"Oh my own Robert! I did not believe it! But I waited two long, weary years, and then later said he was certain it was true, and it would make him happy if I would—"

Her tears explained the rest. I knew what she meant and I drew her fondly to my heart and said:

"I know you would not forget me, Lilly. I am rich, rich, now, and very unlike death, eh? But I will not stay longer at present, darling. I will hasten to prove to you what a thorough rascal you were near marrying. I shall send some one to look after your safety, and take that rascal away from you."

The rascal did not move. I had taken all the "Mr. Markham" out of him, so, without much notice of the terror-stricken Mr. and Mrs. Graham, but taking one long, fond kiss from the dear lips of Lilly, I departed hastily from the house.

I had determined to give this episode a fit denouement, and I think you will admit I did so, when I tell you that the authorities of the parish and town next day to let the marriage take place next day (as that was the date fixed for it) upon any account. After doing this I went to London, and there met Tom and told him that I had found the robber of our nuggets, nearly robbing me of my most golden treasure in life. Tom and I next morning found out that Simon Rail had come to England after the robbery, found my friends, reported my death (which my neglect in not writing served to corroborate), obtained a place of trust upon false representations, and ultimately made the acquaintance of the Grahams, to complete his villainy by marrying my betrothed.

We found out also that his employers had that morning discovered they were £1,000 short, and had dispatched two detectives to find the faithful Mr. Markham.

Well, after all, when I come to look back to it, and think how I went down next day; how they told me all about the deception of that rascal; how I paid back £400 to Rail's employers that he had advanced to the Grahams; when I was once recognized as the true-genuine Bob Phillips; when the villain was sent back to the scene of his first exploits for several years at her majesty's expense; when Thompson came down with his long loved Alice, I said to Tom, "Ah, it is not our doing Tom, it is God's ever watchful care that tests us, loves us, and brings us always to our trials just in time to be happy."

And when Tom was married, he said, "Yes, Bob, and it was you who taught me to believe in woman's faith and constancy; and I cannot feel quite happy until I own a part of my happiness is due alone to you."

—Father Munich has some cotton plants which he raised himself. He is expecting to have them at the Fair this evening, showing that the staple product can also be raised in Southern Wisconsin; but he is unwilling to decide whether it would be a profitable undertaking to engage in raising it on an extensive scale in our climate.
—The Hook & Ladder Company are making preparations to give a dance at Cannon's hall on Thanksgiving eve. We need hardly say that the affair will be a grand success. Everybody knows that the Company will make it such, and it will be one of the most enjoyable social occasions of the season. The date should be kept in mind.

—Frank Nevins, of the Chicago Tribune who has been looking up the Wisconsin campaign of late, was in the city yesterday and to-day. ## TALL TALK.

The Republican Orators Strike Some Telling Blows for the Good of the Cause.

Zach Chandler, General Logan, General Hurlburt, and Colonel Tutthill Speak to Eager Listeners.

Their Views of the Political Issues of the Day Set forth in Glowing Words.

They are Endorsed by the Hearty Applause and Rousing Cheers of Large Audiences.

A Rousing Rally.

The grand Republican rally is over but the enthusiasm awakened by it is not, and will not be over for some time yet. It is seldom that so able speakers can be grouped together for a meeting here, and they each had eager listeners.

GENERAL HURLBURT, who set the ball rolling yesterday afternoon, is a sound thinker and has a droll way of stating some sharp points, which splices his talk in a pleasing manner. He opened his speech by repeating a remark which he overheard on the streets here. He heard a man say that he didn't see what business these carpet-baggers from Illinois had to come up and meddle with Wisconsin's election. We had right here the spirit of State's right, the same in quality though not in quantity that the South has. The speaker thought there had been too much tenderness shown both to offenders and offenses. There was no crime as horrible as treason and rebellion. The people here were excited over two or three murders, but Baumgarten's horrible deed paled in comparison with those of Lee, Davis, and of others who now sit in the council chambers of the nation, for they attempted to take the life of a nation. He would speak of but two parties, for there was no third party now. There was a Greenback party, the child of hard times, but it was no more, and no man was poor enough to say the funeral service over it. The Republicans could give a reason for the faith that was within them. He briefly sketched the achievements of the party, and then going over the record of Democracy asked what there was to be proud of in that. He described the Democratic party as an instance of "evolution backwards." In the times of Jackson it had some backbone, a skull, some brains, some loyalty, but it had kept going from the form of a man to that of an ape, and then to that of a dog and so on until it had nearly reached that infinitesimal bit of flabby blubber, which scientists place as the beginning of the evolution of life. He struck some hard blows concerning the shot gun and tissue ballot policy, and urged the hearers to rally earnestly for the suppression of such outrages.

When he had finished, Congressman Williams asked the audience if they could imagine from such a patriotic speech that they had been listening to a native Southerner, one who in South Carolina had years ago drunk in loyalty with his mother's milk, and asked them which they liked best, a Southern patriot, or a Northern doughface? [Laughter and cheers.] He introduced, amidst the wildest enthusiasm

GEN. JOHN A. LOGAN.
General Logan spent an hour and a half in a very clear, earnest strain of argument, putting his points sharply, and linking them together so clearly as not to allow room for any shafts of the opposition to enter. He gave his best thought on a close analysis of the constitution and amendments as far as they touched upon the States rights doctrine, and showed in a clear manner the fallacies which the Democratic party had fallen into. The earnest manner of the speaker set the pit-1 one climax of eloquence onto another, called forth unbounded applause. The speaker did not spend much time in telling funny stories, but made one of the most able, forcible arguments, ever listened to in Rock county. It was a grand effort, and no synopsis would do it justice.

ZACH CHANDLER'S SPEECH.
When Zach Chandler's towering form was seen rising, as Dr. Palmer introduced him there was an outburst of deafening applause, and as this quieted down, Postmaster Patterson jumped to his feet and proposed three cheers for the "son of thunder" from Michigan. It was given with a "tiger," and as soon as Senator Chandler's voice could be heard, he dryly remarked that his was pretty light thunder. This renewed the laughter and cheers, and when it quieted he set it again in motion by saying that he didn't like to bring in as thunder at the end of such a storm.

He then spoke of what he deemed a more important matter than finances, debt, or any of the other subjects he had touched upon. It was the question "Are we or are we not a nation?" When the constitution was framed the people settled into the belief that, instead of a Confederation of States, which had existed for several years, they had a Government. All sides so obeyed. The whisky rebellion in Pennsylvania was put down by the strong arm of the Government, and then all were sure it was a Government. That belief remained. It was in the days of General Jackson, South Carolina raised the flag of rebellion in an attempt to force a concession on the tariff question. General Jackson was in the Presidential chair at the time, and being informed that South Carolina under the leadership of John C. Calhoun, had raised the flag of rebellion, said: "Let South Carolina commit the first overt act of treason, and by the Eternal, I will hang John C. Calhoun." (Prolonged applause.) They knew he meant it. Calhoun knew it, and the first overt act was not committed. Then all were sure we had a Government. That impression remained until twenty-its head, and again the threat was made to overthrow the Government unless we acceded to their wishes. This threat was daily made in Congress. For four years this threatening continued. The speaker described vividly the deplorable condition of the country with its weakened army and depleted treasury when Abraham Lincoln took the Presidential chair, and the Republican party took the reins of power. [Cheers.] That party undertook to save the Government. Without credit, without money, without arms, we undertook to carry on a war, and for four years it was continued, notwithstanding that a large political organization at the North and the South declared it to be a failure. [Cheers.] The war was carried on successfully and we believe we saved the Government, and believe so now. [Applause.] When the rebels surrendered at Appomattox, they surrendered to a Government. [Applause.] They admitted that their State rights theory had been decided against them after they had submitted it to the arbitration of arms.

They pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honors to overthrow this government, and when they failed they lost all. [Applause.] They made no claim then against the government, and asked simply that their miserable lives might be spared. Their lives were given them, and they were told to go home and behave themselves and obey the laws. They had forfeited their property, but it was restored to them. Their citizenship was restored. They were received again as brethren, and the failed call was killed, and they invited to the feast, but they turned right around, and claimed that they had always owned the call themselves. [Applause and laughter.]

By the laws of war and of nations they were bound to pay all the expenses of the war, but we showed them a magnanimity such as the world had never seen. [Renewed applause.] The great mistake made was that we were too magnanimous. Enough rebels ought to have been hung to have made treason forever odious. [Applause.] Now after these years are past the same issues come up again. Then they said "Obey our demands, or we will shoot your Government to death," and now after twenty years they say "Do this: obey our demands, or we will starve your Government to death." [Laughter.] The speaker said he had rather be shot to death than starved to death. These are the same men who surrendered as prisoners of war, and who now have control of Congress.

THE EVENING MEETING.
The meeting was then adjourned until 7.30 o'clock, in the evening, when the tent was again crowded with listeners in spite of the chilliness of the night. The Bower City Band and the Evansville Cornet Band, together with a large number of citizens escorted the speakers from the Myers house to the tent. Dr. Henry Palmer presided, and introduced to the audience Zach Chandler, whom he said held the floor and the audience when adjournment was taken, and to him they would be yielded now. The speaker was greeted with a lively round of applause. He said he didn't believe he held the audience when adjournment was taken. This caused a happy uproar of laughter, and having put the audience in the best of humor he proceeded at once to business, taking up the Greenbackism first, and giving it some deadly raps. He defined it by saying it was an attempt to pay something with nothing. The Ohio "idea" was simply to pay off bonded debt with promises never to pay. [Laughter and cheers.] He took no stock in the idea that bondholders were criminals. Every man who had a dollar invested in a savings bank was a bond holder. There were ninety more men who had not over $100 in bonds to every one who had $10,000 and over, and yet some would willingly ruin the ninety and nine for the sake of ruining this hundredth man. He also discussed the free coinage of silver. The Warner bill, had it passed would have had the effect of reducing our coin currency to a single standard. It was a Democratic project for the benefit of bullion owners and speculators. He spoke sharply of the extraordinary amount of the rebel claims introduced into Congress, and amounting to more than two thousand millions of dollars; and of the petition which was being largely circulated in the South to pay Southern officers and soldiers for lost time, lost lives, lost limbs, and of the scheme for pensioning Jeff Davis.

The speaker spoke in strong terms against the shot-gun policy and tissue bullets, and denounced bitterly the caucus system in Congress which permitted the South to dominate over the North. It was no use to say that the Republican party had accomplished its mission. Its mission would not be fulfilled until every man could vote as freely in Mississippi as in Wisconsin. [Applause.] Its mission had but just begun. The present conflict was only a skirmish preceding the greater battle of 1890. He did not know who their National standard bearer would be. It might be the silent man, who sometimes smokes a cigar, and whom the rebels don't like. [Prolonged applause.] It might be the Secretary of the Treasury. [Further cheering.] Whatever it was there would be success. In closing the speaker urged each of his hearers to work for the cause of loyalty and to stand by their colors.

Dr. Palmer then introduced COL. R. S. TUTTHILL, of Chicago, who was received with applause. He spoke of the difference between our Government and monarchies. Here it was the duty and privilege of the people to provide for themselves rulers and laws. It was the duty of every citizen to closely consider the status of national affairs, and what is best to be done. The voters were the sovereigns, and the ones to decide. Having decided what to do we should be cravens indeed did we not do it. It was the duty of every citizen to give a reason for the faith within him. It was not enough to be a Republican because born so, or to be a Democrat because one's father was one. It was the duty of each man to do his duty to his country, irrespective of party, and to tear away from party ties, if the party was against the interests of the nation. We supposed the war ended sixteen years ago, and that it accomplished something. Yet we now see the Government in the hands of those who have committed every crime in the calendar, in their attempts to destroy it. Their great crime of rebellion had been forgiven with a magnanimity, which was almost idiotic. Rebels now controlled both houses. Some might say perhaps it would be all right that they are citizens, and may legislate all right, but they show the same spirit as in 1861. They boast of their treason, and do not admit they were in the wrong. They say the only mistake they made was that they ought to have fought it out under the old flag, and to have put the North on the defensive. It is their declared purpose now to get control and keep control of the government. The lives of two men alone stand between them and absolute control. They would have the results of the war go for naught. The war secured citizenship for every one of us, and citizenship was a precious boon. It established the fact that this was a nation. Our citizens can go around the world under its protection, and yet in sections of our own country hundreds are slain, some of whom fought for our country, some were born here, and yet we are told the nation must not interfere. It was the spirit of Republicanism to secure and preserve the right of all, and it will do it. No such outrages shall exist. The country stands on the brink of danger, and there is evident the same determination to save it which had appeared in 1861, and which had shown itself lately in Ohio, Maine and Iowa, and which would show itself next Tuesday. In 1861 there was a necessity for patriotic men to break from party ties and save the nation, and say as General Logan did "I know no political party as long as my country's flag is in danger." Another such time had now come, and it was the duty of all to unite with the Republicans in their attempt to put down this second rebellion. It was easier to vote right than to wait and let things go wrong until it became necessary to take the bayonet and make it right. He made an urgent appeal to all to do their duty and closed with a pleasing tribute to General Logan, who was to follow him.

Colonel Tutthill finished yet earnest speaker. He was frequently interrupted by cheers. He spoke boldly yet without rant, and in manner and language holds an audience in the closest attention.

GENERAL LOGAN was introduced amidst cheers. He took up the discussion of the attempt to abolish the national banks, and showed the fallacy of the proposal to substitute greenbacks for national bank notes. The latter were taxable and the former were not, and if such a substitution was made the burden on the people would be still greater, and the interest on the bonds would not be stopped.

The speaker told a few of his characteristic anecdotes, which he applied happily, for he was afraid, he said, to say much, for fear he would hurt the feelings of the Democrats, as everybody knew he was tender of them. He was afraid some of them might be offended and leave, as the Democrats did who objected to hearing the preacher speak on politics, and was got up and left church, because the preacher said that the sinners and all the nations which did not fear God would be burned into hell.

The Democrat said if that did not mean his party, who did it mean? The speaker also got up the laugh on the Greenbackers. He said that Congressman Weaver in speaking at Polo, Ill., against the proposed resumption, said that "the Republican notion of resumption was the great absorber of all the interests of the country." An Irishman hearing him, did not understand what "resumption" meant, or what "absorber" meant, but he got the idea that it would destroy the country. The next morning the Irishman was seen sitting in front of his cornfield with a jug and a shot gun. He said he was watching for that "resumption absorber" that Weaver told about, and "be jabers if that resumption absorber gets into my cornfield, I'll just fill him full of shot." He thought that Irishman was the fellow who killed the Greenback party.

General Logan closed with a well put illustration of farm life. He pictured out the ruined condition of Uncle Sam's farm under the Democratic management, and the improvements made by the Republicans, and the folly of giving it back into the hands of those who had tried to ruin it.

At the close of his speech three cheers were again given for the speakers and the gathering dispersed.

General Hurlburt left last evening for Eau Claire, where he speaks to-night. The other speakers left this morning for Chicago.

I deem it my duty to state that Mr. of this county had his right lung seriously affected with tubercular deposit, accompanied with night sweats, frequent hemorrhage, copious expectoration and much emaciation; the use of Fellows' Syrup of Hypophosphites seems to have arrested the progress of the disease almost immediately, the hemorrhage has not returned, his appetite is excellent, and he is able to attend to his business as usual.

STOCK OPERATIONS THAT PAY.
The past few weeks have been prolific of immense percentages of profit at the New York Exchange, by the careful use of moderate sums in well manipulated stock transactions, which returned a legitimate gain on capital invested according to correct business principles. Great activity prevails in the market. The safest and most successful method for operating in a regular way is in financial Union by the Protective System of dealing in stocks, which affords absolute guarantee that cannot possibly be secured otherwise. The vast aggregates on the sales of shares that have recently attained such mighty proportions, have been chiefly promoted by the infusion of this new element, which has produced results surprising to all. The conservative basis of the system is its great safety. To be sure of gaining the large profits that accrue so quickly in stock movements, there must be reasonable protection against sweeping risks. This is why the Protective System excels all. On Monday three gentlemen in New York each invested $100 in Lake Shore stock by the Financial Union system, and on Thursday closed the operation with a net profit of $5,377.47 for each investor. Tuesday's bank cashier in Publick Street, invested $100 in Protective Options on Northwestern stock, and on Saturday closed the contract with $12,585.73 profit. Early in the previous week two mechanics in Boston united their capital and invested $25 in Michigan Central, and 10 days afterwards they acknowledged receipt of $1,349.55 profit. The last week in July five farmers in Michigan each invested $50 each in Financial Union on St. Paul stock, and on Thursday, the 14th of August, they closed the deal and divided $1,500 in profits. They made a clean profit of $379.95. On Saturday a prominent Pennsylvania politician invested $1,500 in Delaware, Lackawanna and Western and Michigan Central stocks, and in five days drew out of the market with $1,563.41 profit. A large brewer in St. Louis put $250 in Protective Options on St. Paul and Northwestern stocks, and fifteen days afterward closed with a gain of $14,968.37. These are examples of what has been accomplished in Financial Union by the Protective System of operating in stocks when good advice has been followed. With the present activity the prospects for gain in the near future are more favorable, as the operations are equally as good for catching the profit from fluctuations up or down as they catch amounts from $5 to $25,000 or more can be invested with proportionate success by the Financial Union system, and the prospect for gain in the control of funds in the hands of investors, with a definite knowledge at all times of just what stocks they are holding, so that they can see at a glance what their profits are at any hour of the day by referring to market quotations. All operators are assured of straightforward treatment by the Financial Union system. Orders filled and instructions followed by Messrs. FRANK M. DUBBEL & CO., Bankers and Brokers, No. 19 Broad Street, New York City. oct27daw2w.
